

ABSTRACT

A system and method for object based delivery of on-line courses and content. The system and method can be used, for example, to develop instructional and educational content. Information stored on the system may be searched and reused in developing a new course. Alternatively, new content may be created using the system. The system and method includes administrative functions to monitor the development of content and the efficient use of the system.